Photo by Friedemann Vogel/EPA-EFE Feb. 21 (UPI) -- Manchester City star Leroy Sane scored a powerful free-kick for the equalizer in the Sky Blues' 3-2 win over Schalke 04 in a Champions League match. Sane's sinking shot came in the 85th minute of Wednesday's first leg match at the Veltins-Arena in Gelsenkirchen, Germany. Sergio Agüero gave the Sky Blues their early lead with a 18th-minute equaliser. Nabil Bentaleb equalised with a penalty in the 38th minute before attempting another penalty in the 45th minute to give Schalke a 2-1 lead at half-time. Both sides played the second half scoreless before Sane attacked from more than 20 yards to tie the score within 40 minutes into the second frame. Sane entered the game as a substitute for Agüero in the 78th minute. He dug in his left boot for an explosion, sending the ball jipping into the right side of the net past the diving Ralf Fahrmann. Raheem Sterling added the winner in the 90th minute, giving the Sky Blues the lead in the round of 16 tie. We knew it was going to be a tough match here, like it's always been in the Champions League. Sane told ManCity.com. RELATED Tottenham star Harry Kane is ahead of schedule with an ankle injury in the end, we did it. We scored three goals away from home and that was the most important thing. to score away. Now, we'll see what happens in return. City face Chelsea in the League Cup final at 11.30am .m. Sunday at Wembley Stadium in London. The Sky Blues return to their Champions League clash against Schalke on March 4.m 12 at the Etihad Stadium in Manchester, England. The Champions League has announced that Sane's free-kick in Man City's 3-2 win over Schalke 04 was named Goal of the Week.Leroy Sane's stunning 25-yard free-kick against his boyhood club drew Man City level. Sane lined up a free kick from just under 30 yards in the central position. His left-footed effort curled and dipped into the top right corner past the diving Fahrmann. On a night when Manchester City decided to reveal all their shortcomings to the world, giving an argument as to why they were still not ready to win the Champions League, they still found a way to clinch an unlikely one-leg away win in the quarter-finals. With five minutes left here City trailed 2-1, down to 10 men, looking lost, panicked, worried and unsure if they would ever manage to break Europe. They have conceded two first-half penalties, losing Nicolas Otamendi to two yellow cards, errors are starting to appear. They looked as callow as they had done at any stage in their long and slow learning curve in the Champions League.Then, Leroy Sane's free-kick, suddenly, into the top corner, and City level. Then Ederson's long ball, Sterling jumped behind and rolled over at the finish. The City Suddenly 3-2, having beaten Schalke with a one-two combination much stronger and more painful than the one in the opposite direction at the end of the first half. The win takes the pressure off the second leg at the Etihad Stadium next month and means City can focus on the Carabao Cup final in a much lighter mood. Yes, they have to play better than they did for most of this game, but at this stage of the season it is about crossing the line. Everything felt so simple and clear in the first 20 minutes when City set about doing exactly what Pep Guardiola asked, coming here and playing with all their normal style and charisma. As soon as the game started City had Schalke pinned back in their own half, and it took eight minutes for the hosts to even get the ball beyond halfway through. And even that move ended with Mark Uth hitting a cross to Hamza Mendyl.Action Images via ReutersWhen City scored their first goal, it felt like proof of the gulf between the teams. Schalke goalkeeper Ralf Fahrmann played a lazy pass to the dozy Salif Sane, and it was too easy for David Silva to tap the ball into Agüero for tapping. Remember that at this stage last season, City won their away first leg 4-0 in Basel. And the same results appear on the cards here tonight. But City recently had problems with a 1-0 win. Especially in a game like this, away from home, after an early goal, against a team they have to beat. As if leading the players jokingly to think they don't have to keep working hard. City can complain about the VAR decision that changed this game against them but there were a lot of mistakes on their part as well. They had started sloppy as soon as Agüero's goal, slower on the ball, poorer in their passing, less like themselves than they were at the start. The first crucial moment came when Daniel Caligiuri shot from outside the box and Nicolas Otamendi deflected it backwards for a corner. He tried to pull his arm away, but the Schalke players still wanted a penalty. And it took a few minutes of VAR consultation, no one on the ground really knew what was going on, before Carlos Del Cerro Grande awarded a penalty. Bentaleb converted easily. Schalke were awarded a controversial penalty by VARCity having a problem with reacting to adversity. They get so upset when they make a mistake that they can't stop themselves from making a similar one right after. So when, five minutes after the first penalty, Fernandinho dragged Salif Sane to give a much clearer second. No NEED VAR this time. Bentaleb scored again. Literally no one here expects Schalke to be 2-1 up at any point. Not a fan before the game started. And certainly not after City took their early lead. It gave the second half an unusual mood, a situation that no one had prepared for. The Onus were at City to control the game again, just as they did in the first half. Sane's stunning free-kick changed his tie But the reality is that's not it There was something a little off about City's performance in the second half. They can't play with the usual excellence and verve. Instead, they look a little anxious and nervy, even when they dominate possession. Sterling, Agüero and Gundogan hit unnecessary shots from far out, tearing up City's careful plan, taking the option of low percentage glory instead. When De Bruyne overhit through the ball far beyond Agüero and out of the game. City's lack of balance was evident. When City played at their best they were resistant to counter-attacks, but it was a quick break that sank their chances for the night here. Guido Burgstaller, as a substitute, tore right and Otamendi, never comfortable with the space behind him, had to cut it down. He was booked for his handball for the first penalty and so Del Cerro Grande just sent him away. Guardiola must put Vincent Kompany on David Silva to keep City with the back four. City looked desperate, taking a 2-1 defeat back to Manchester. They needed something new, something different from a pattern that looked fat and predictable here in the second half. And it came off the bench and it came from a set piece. City had a free-kick 30 yards out and with De Bruyne off the pace all night, Leroy Sane picked it up instead. He just came but he bent it into the top corner of the net. And if that feels unusual, surprising and decisive in the flow of the tie, it was nothing on Sterling's winner five minutes later. Then.
